After years of eating food, especially toxic food, it is common to build up a layer of 'mucoid plaque' on the inside walls of the intestines. This plaque greatly reduces our ability to absorb nutrition which leads to countless health problems. Doing cleanses properly can help absorb and pull this plaque from the intestinal walls and carry it out of the body. After cleansing and removing this plaque, most people notice their food tastes better, their sense of smell is improved, and they have more energy. Most cleanses are for 2 weeks for the average person and 2 to 3 months for those with multiple health issues. It is very important to eat fiber and drink lots of water during a cleanse in order to flush out the junk.
